

Fritz B. Burns Chair in Real Property

Loyola Law School Los Angeles invites applications for the Fritz B. Burns Chair in Real Property.

JOB DESCRIPTION:

The concept of owning real property is of ancient origin. The acquisition, use, and transfer of real property, however, all have grown increasingly complex. Contemporary society imposes restrictions on land use born of a new consciousness and vigilant concern for the environment. The Fritz B. Burns Chair in Real Property is expected to continue the leadership of the chair's current holder, Roger Findley, in the field of property law and related fields so as to aid the University's mission of service, teaching and scholarship. Salary and benefits are commensurate with the importance that the law school and the Fritz B. Burns Foundation attach to this endowed chair.

JOB QUALIFICATIONS:

The holder of the Chair should be a nationally prominent scholar and excellent teacher with already demonstrated accomplishments and promise of future contributions to the field of property, broadly defined, including land use and environmental law. The recipient of this chair is expected to continue to excel in legal scholarship and teaching, and to participate actively in the affairs of the law school. The Search Committee particularly welcomes applications from candidates who will enhance the diversity of its law faculty.

APPLICATION PROCEDURE:

Applications should include a letter of interest and a c.v. Applications or inquiries should be addressed to:
