OBJECTIVES

1. Explore survivor's perceptions of justice and whether restorative justice can be applied to human trafficking cases.
2. Inspire lived-experience experts to take actions within their own communities and increase support for a restorative justice approach that responds to the needs of human trafficking survivors, repairs the harm, and shifts away from the punitive model of the traditional legal system.
3. Center the voice of survivors in a proposal to fund a pilot program in Los Angeles County that utilizes Restorative Justice in human trafficking cases
4. Identify a group of survivor leaders interested in engaging in policy work around restorative justice.
