About the Entertainment & Media Law Institute

Loyola Law School is one of the top-ranked law schools in the nation for its robust entertainment and media law curriculum. Its Entertainment & Media Law Institute includes a diverse schedule of courses taught by alumni and other established lawyers who are specialists in their fields, frequent speaker panels on the latest industry trends in law and technology, the Entertainment Law Fellowship, the annual TechTainment symposium and the Entertainment Law Practicum. EMLI Director Julie Shapiro '89 congratulates this year's honorees, as well as those alumni whom Variety has honored in the past. The EMLI prides itself in training the next generation of leaders in the entertainment industry!

New Pathway for Aspiring Power Lawyers

Starting in Fall 2022, Loyola Law School is rebooting its top-ranked Evening JD program to require a regular on-campus commitment of just one night a week.
