LOYOLA LAW SCHOOL’S U.S.-CHINA ENTERTAINMENT LAW CONFERENCE TO EXPLORE OPPORTUNITIES & CHALLENGES OF COLLABORATION

Los Angeles – Loyola Law School, Los Angeles and the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office (USPTO) will host the first U.S.-China Entertainment Law Conference on Wednesday, Nov. 2, 2016, to examine the risks and benefits of cross-border collaboration. The event, to be held on Loyola’s downtown LA campus, will feature top executives from major U.S. and Chinese entertainment studios, senior policymakers, influential academics and USPTO officers.

The daylong conference will include a series of panels on the emerging legal issues stemming from a rise in partnership deals. Panels will include “Year in Review: Recent Developments in the U.S.-China Entertainment Industry,” “Commercialization of Content,” “IP Issues Related to the U.S.-China Entertainment Industry” and “Opportunities and Legal Challenges in the U.S.-China Collaboration of Movies, TV Productions, Music and Gaming.”
